Edson S. MacKenzie, 84
Retired teacher

In 1951, Edson S. MacKenzie, born in Athens, Georgia, completed his B.S. and M.S. degrees in electrical engineering from the University of Wisconsin-Madison. Following graduation, he moved to Boston, where he worked as a design engineer for several years. In 1954, he joined the faculty of the Electrical Engineering Department at Northeastern University, where he taught for 33 years. In 1987, he retired as a full professor. He is survived by his wife, Anna M. MacKenzie, and their three children, Bruce, Michael, and Susan. Memorial donations may be made to the Lynn Community Chest, Lynn, Massachusetts.

Deliberations begin in Cahill corruption case

On Tuesday, the case against ex-District Attorney Cahill began with opening statements. Cahill is facing charges of official misconduct, conflict of interest, and obstruction of justice. The trial is expected to last several weeks. The defense attorney, speaking to the jury, said Cahill was simply doing his job and did not do anything wrong.
